EUMETSAT CONFERENCES AND PUBLICATIONS

1 CONFERENCES AND WORKSHOPS

The city of Weimar with its various cultural and intellectual associations provided plenty of ground for inspiration among the record number of 220 participants at the 2003 EUMETSAT Meteorological Satellite Conference from 29 September to 3 October. EUMETSAT's satellite partners from across the globe set the scene in the first session, introducing the status of current and future programmes and systems within their respective countries.

Certainly the highlight of the Conference was the second day's session dedicated to first results from MSG-1 where promises are now definitely turning to reality with the demonstration of some initial developments and innovative use of the data. The poster session, another important part of the conference, also attracted record numbers of 55 participants.

Preparations for the 2004 Conference to take place in Prague, Czech Republic, from 31 May to 4 June 2004 are well under way and preliminary discussions have also taken place on the Satellite Conference in 2005, likely to be held in Dubrovnik, Croatia.

The seventh biennial International Winds Workshop from 14-17 June will take place in Helsinki, being hosted by the Finnish Meteorological Institute and co-organised by EUMETSAT.
